Month Lists: Top Three & Regional Top Five

All-time Illinois Big Months (top three per month)

A new state record was set last year when Doug Stotz broke his own November record by eight species! Doug has really set the parameters for others to target for that month. Doug also had the second highest October tally on record, coming up only two species short of the current record, one that has lasted for almost a decade. Not to be forgotten in his other great tallies is Doug's December total, the second highest ever recorded in Illinois. Doug now has the top three December tallies. Another great total was Jeff Chapman's tally for April, which was the third highest ever recorded, only four species short of an alltime record. -EW

Regional Big Months (top five per region)

We are receiving more tallies for this list with the Northern region have very good representation for the whole year. At this point, one can see challenging standards set for each northern Big Month. However, there are many gaps in other months for the central and southern regions, although it's not due to some excellent tallies achieved, but rather lack of reporting. Besides the aforementioned alltime top three Big Month reports, there were a few other noteworthy tallies: Doug Stotz's second highest northern February; Anthony Friend and Stotz tied for the third highest northern March; Stotz's second highest central June; Frank Holmes second highest southern September and third highest southern October; Jeff Chapman's highest southern November; Stotz's highest northern November; Chapman's highest southern December; Holmes third highest southern December; Stotz's third highest northern December.
