

IOS Lister's Corner 2009

Total Counties per Species List

(Top six totals per county - 102 possible counties)

Since the inception of this list, the top White-winged Crossbill tally had stood at seven counties. However, starting on January 11th, when these birds exploded into our state, county tallies expanded quickly, to the point that the lowest tally listed is more than 50% higher than the former top tally! A number of birders were stirred to make field trips across the state specifically looking for this crossbill, finally ending with Andy Sigler edging out Mike Baum in the 'crossbill' race. This invasion year now gives the illusion that White-winged Crossbills can be found in as many counties as Black-crowned Night-Heron or Hooded Warblers. Perhaps a bit lost in the crossbill excitement was the Common Redpoll invasion. In a similar storyline, the former top tally in this list wouldn't even break into the current top six! It might be hard to break into this (and the crossbill) top six until we see another winter finch invasion.

On the opposite side of the spectrum could be the Black-billed Cuckoo, whose numbers have been documented as diminishing. This list supports that thought as none of the birders on last year's list added even a single county to their cuckoo tally. It's possible this bird has transitioned into a rare state species with this list offering a metric on their former widespread presence. One may also wonder if the same story is in progress for Loggerhead Shrike, where, again, none of last year's listers increased their county tallies, suggesting that, in the future, finding them in new areas may be quite challenging. There were some amazing individual highlights that stood out. It appears Craig Taylor's and the 'daytime' raptor species had a special rapport last year as his totals in that family showed significant increases for at least eight species. Mike Baum added three new counties for Laughing Gull, a 50% county increase over his former tally. He also added Purple Finch in 24 new counties, a 120% increase over his former tally. Lastly, Keith McMullen has seen Rufous Hummingbird in seven counties, more than double the next tally.

Mike Madsen reported for the first time and both McMullen and David Johnson gave updates, all of which impacted many species tallies. As such, this list has been expanded to include the top six tallies for each species.

"Multiple observers" generally means that 10+ birders have reported the same total.
